ADDITIONAL EVENT WEDNESDAY, MARCH 4

Evening Scientific Poster Session and Opening Reception – Call for Abstracts to Follow

These courses are presented by the Division of Occupational and Environmental Medicine in the Department of Medicine at the University of California San Francisco. It provides a targeted review and update of current topics in occupational and environmental medicine. The course is designed for occupational and environmental health professionals, including occupational physicians and nurses, and industrial hygienists. It also meets the needs of primary care providers and others engaged in practice and research including physicians (family physicians, practitioners, internists, emergency medicine specialists), general nurse practitioners and other nursing professionals, and physician assistants. Policy makers and medical-legal practitioners also benefit from the curriculum offered.

The first day of the curriculum, Being an Occupational and Environmental Health “Detective” addresses the basic components of assessing and responding to occupational or environmental health threats at the individual or group level. A poster session the evening before will supplement this course content, including case reports and research data. The second day and final half-day of the course will cover a multi-topic theme: Updates in Occupational and Environmental Medicine.

TARGET AUDIENCE

This course is designed to provide the experienced clinician with a review of vulnerable workers and communities at environmental risk, as well as to contextualize other topics emerging within the epidemiology of OEM and the evaluation and treatment of occupational and environmental diseases and injuries. Most attendees will be occupational practitioners, but some are likely to be specialists in related fields who will profit by an in-depth presentation of OEM topics.

OBJECTIVES

An attendee completing this course will be able to:

- Improve their assessment of occupational and environmental risk;
- Adopt new medical knowledge into preventive activities addressing established and emerging risk factors and new diseases entities;
- Evaluate scientific data in the field of occupational and environmental medicine;
- Expand their differential diagnosis to incorporate a wider range of environmental and occupational factors in various disease and injury processes;
- Improve diagnostic methods and treatment options for selected occupational and environmental conditions;
- Improve management in terms of required regulatory management of specific work-related scenarios;
- Inform the prioritization of clinical care, research, and public health policy with state of the art updates.
